Lourmarin In The Eighteenth Century: A Study Of A French Village

Thomas F Sheppard

Eighteenth-Century Studies is an academic journal established in 1966 and the official publication of the American Society for Eighteenth-Century Studies. It focuses on all aspects of 18th century history. It is related to the annual Studies in Eighteenth-Century Culture. The current editor-in-chief is Sean Moore (University of New Hampshire). The journal is published quarterly in October, January, April, and July by the Johns Hopkins University Press. Hence, studies using the Oxford English Dictionary revealing that Fr. was the primary source of loans outnumbering Latin, the second largest source, four to one should hardly surprise us. As Baugh points out "where two languages exist side by side for a long time and the relations of the people speaking them are as intimate as they were in England, a considerable transference of words is inevitable" (163). As to the quantity of loans, Baugh states that it is unbelievably great and that there is nothing comparable to it in the previous or subsequent history of the language.
