In the Middle Ages the church ran the only hospitals. In York, there were several hospitals where the monks cared for the sick and poor as best they could. There was also an abbey dedicated to St Mary outside the town walls. Many other towns in Yorkshire boomed with the industrial revolution. However, in the early 19th century York stayed a market town with many craftsmen but no factories. A railway was built from Leeds to York in 1839. Welcome to History through Art. Today we’ll be looking at the history, art and culture of Ancient Greece. But why should you be interested in learning about a civilization more than three thousand years old? For the Ancient Greeks left an enormous legacy to Western Civilization. For instance, if it weren’t for the philosophers of Ancient Greece such as Plato we might not be living in a republic. Democracy might not be the ideal political system in the Western world. Some of this artistic legacy is still available for us to study today, 2500 years or more after it was created. Perhaps you can discover eternal truths about human frailty and passion in the play Lysistrata by Aristophanes, or understand the real measure of a hero as found in Homer’s epic poems The Iliad and The Odyssey.
