Galut: Modern Jewish Reflections on Homelessness and Homecoming, comprehensive Galut: Modern Jewish Reflections on Homelessness and Homecoming, a "history of Jewish exile" that traces the development in Jewish thought of ideas of exile and homecoming from the Bible through the twentieth century. Though historically anchored in their interpretations, Davies and Eisen assert that they have chosen the theme of exile and return for personal and political reasons-Davies as a means to work through his feelings about Israel in the wake of the Six-Day War, and Eisen to further the debate between American and Israeli Jews about galut and homecoming, and Eisen is a Jewish Studies scholar in the sociology of religion and Modern Jewish Thought. He received his doctorate in the History of Jewish Thought from The Hebrew University of Jerusalem and has also earned a B.A. in Religious Thought from the University of Pennsylvania and a B.Phil. in the Sociology of Religion at Oxford University. He was a student of Professor Samuel Tobias Lachs. He previously served as Senior Lecturer at the Tel Aviv University and Assistant Professor at Columbia University.
