School districts are putting more stress on teachers to teach children the core classes. Educators are forgetting about how the stress trickles down to the children too. Children are now expected to spend hours studying at home; in addition, kids are spending 7 or more hours engaging in learning new material. It is proven that children who get adequate amounts of exercise are generally happier and don’t suffer from ailments such as depression or anxiety. Exercise helps release natural feel good hormones and helps ward off mental illnesses. Parents need to realize that untreated depression isn’t healthy and it can lead to risky behaviors even in children and teens. Teaches children the importance of exercise.

HEALTHY CHOICES: Making Healthy Choices Lawndale High School

Ms. Mai Slide 2 Making Healthy Choices As we just learned, wellness is a state of physical, intellectual, emotional, and social well-being that involves making decisions. Understanding that some decisions may be out of our own control (heredity or physical environment), there are still factors that affect your health that you can control. Taking responsibility for those choices involves weighing the risks connected to each decision you make. Slide 3 Understanding Risks Risk the degree of danger that goes along with a situation. All risks
