Dante Gabriel Rossetti had later changed the order of his name because he wanted to stress on his kingship. He was born on 12th May 1828. His father was an Italian patriot because of his political activities. It was in the late 60s that Rossetti started suffering from health problems. He suffered from eyesight problem and also the problem of weak eyesight. He then started drinking chloral by mixing it with whiskey. He found this to be the solution to his insomnia. But it worked to his disadvantage and his depression became even graver. It was Robert Buchanan’s attack on Rossetti that completely changed him as a person. It was in the summer of 1872, that he suffered a complete mental breakdown. There is also evidence that proves that he also tried committing suicide a number of times.
