A previously unknown Leonardo da Vinci drawing of Saint Sebastian is valued at $15.8m (£12.4m). Auction house Tajan said the drawing, one of eight the Renaissance artist made of the martyred Saint Sebastian, was an "extraordinary discovery". The drawing has been authenticated by an expert from New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. Tajan claims it is the first "new" da Vinci to be discovered in 15 years. The National Gallery is to exhibit a previously unknown oil painting by Leonardo Da Vinci. The 1513 painting, Salvator Mundi (Saviour of the World), shows Christ with one hand raised to make a blessing and the other holding an orb. The work will go on display as part of The National Gallery's exhibition Leonardo da Vinci: Painter of the Court of Milan, which opens from 9 November. The painting was once owned by King Charles I. It was bought by British collector Sir Frederick Cook in 1900, whose descendants sold it in 1958 for just £45.
