The Nature of Things. A loner takes a long journey across a barren desert in search of help for his injured dog. READ REVIEW. With its narrative surrounding a man on a relentless expedition for his canine companion, I couldn’t help watch The Nature of Things and be reminded of the latest feature from previously Short of the Week featured director David Michôd’s “The Rover.” Rühmann’s film is obviously less complex and ambitious, but both stories feature similar characters and similar themes of commitment, determination and loyalty.
