POLICY OPTIONS. Enhancing policymaking coordination and governance. Given the multisectoral nature of innovation and multiplicity of programs, better coordination in policymaking, stronger mechanisms to define budgetary priorities for innovation, and greater coherence and synergies among public policy interventions are necessary. A comprehensive strategy developed by a high-level council could be a useful tool to help coordinate policymaking and guide budgetary decisions as many other countries committed to innovation (e.g. Finland since the early 1990s) have shown. Integrating Mexico’s innovation system globally and removing barriers to the demand for innovation. The rapidly growing body of international knowledge makes it imperative to connect Mexico globally.
