An online entrepreneur says that poor spelling is costing the UK millions of pounds in lost revenue for internet businesses. Charles Duncombe says an analysis of website figures shows a single spelling mistake can cut online sales in half. Mr Duncombe says when recruiting staff he has been "shocked at the poor quality of written English". Figures from the Office for National Statistics published last month showed internet sales in the UK running at Â£527m per week. "I know that industry bemoaning the education system is nothing new but it is becoming more and more of a problem with more companies going online. "This is because when you sell or communicate on the internet, 99% of the time it is done by the written word." For this spell to work, play regularly and completely understand the lottery.
