Some White House trivia: The House itself is really neat, above and beyond the colorful men who have lived here and the politics that happen inside it. It was built by James Hoban and was actually designed to look like a Georgian-era Irish country home. Specifically, Hoban based it on Leinster House in Dublin which later became the seat of the Irish Parliament. George Washington actually picked Hoban to design the building after liking some of his other buildings, even though Washington did not live to see or occupy the White House. It is made out of sandstone, which is both porous and tan col... There’s no boogeyman in the White House now to make people afraid of, said Shannon Watts, the founder of Moms Demand Action, a gun control advocacy group. So they have to make us afraid of one another, and that is how they will market guns in an age when they have a president beholden to them. But it is just the newest piece of a larger news media operation inside the N.R.A. that receives little attention compared with the group’s political and lobbying activity. The organization produces at least seven print and online magazines that have a combined circulation of more than 11 million, according to the N.R.A. Its biggest social media channels on Facebook and Twitter count about 8.7 million followers. Decorated by Michael S. Smith for the Obamas, the White House’s private quarters are as worldly and relaxed as the family that calls them home. And for anyone who appreciates the power of design, Michelle and Barack Obama’s emendations to the White House speak volumes about the sea change in American culture the two have championed for the past eight years. Adorned with an unprecedented array of 20th- and 21st-century artworks, their private quarters remain an oasis of civility and, yes, refined taste in a political arena so often bereft of both. Because of Michael Smith, the private residence of the White House has not only reflected our taste but also upheld the proud history of this building.
