Shanghai, 1925: Urban Nationalism And The Defense Of Foreign Privilege

Nicholas Rowland Clifford

IF WE take at face value the 30-year treaty of friendship, alliance and mutual aid concluded in Moscow on February 14, 1950, between the world's two greatest Communist Powers--the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China--Mao Tse-tung has scored a signal diplomatic victory. The treaty and the supplementary agreements seem in general advantageous to China, and the terms of the treaty do not prove that China under Communist rule is an obedient tool of the Kremlin. Thus the Treaty's propaganda value is immense, and both the Soviet Union and Red China will exploit it.
