Historical Fiction: 1. The Lions of Al-Rassan is a work of historical fantasy by Guy Gavriel Kay. It is set in a peninsula of the same world in which The Sarantine Mosaic and The Last Light of the Sun are set, and is based upon Moorish Spain. The novel concentrates on the relationships between the three peoples: the Kindath (based on the Jews), the Asharites (based on the Muslims), and the Jaddites (based on the Christians). (The actual religions of the Kindath, Asharites, and Jaddites, as described in the novel, bear no relation to Judaism, Islam, and Christianity.) The third alternative is t Unlike her other novels, it is based partly on an occurrence, however, as the author states in a note. The central figure, Hildegarde Wolf, is a fraudulent psychiatrist, nÀ©e Beate Pappenheim, from this premise, the novel proceeds to present a series of humorous coincidences and improbabilities. Å In Burns novel, however, Alma Cogan does not die in 1966, but her residual fame proves a gruesome and unwanted relic as it serves to tie her, through her fans, to an unforeseen encounter with evil. With the exception of Cogans non-death in 1966, Alma Cogan is based largely on true events and real people. 5. Chaka (novel) Chaka is the most famous novel by the writer Thomas Mofolo of Lesotho. Written in Sotho, it is a retelling of the story of the rise. An historic event is one that stands out as having had a significant, history-changing impact. The Battle of Waterloo was an historic event. It stopped Napoleonâ€™s wars of conquest. The Seneca Falls Convention in 1848 was an historic event. It mobilized the womenâ€™s suffrage movement in the United States. The word historical, on the other hand, may be applied to any event that occurred in the past. The Battle of Waterloo was both historical and historic. Å A novel based on an historical person or event may nevertheless be ahistorical if it interprets the character or event in a way to contradict the known facts. Another, useful, if unlovely, â€œhistoryâ€ word is historicity. Ex.
